

NEWSNOTE

Dr. Lloyd E. Rozeboom, Laboratories of Medical Entomology, School of Hygiene and Public Health, 615 North Wolfe Street, Baltimore, Maryland 21205, would very much like to get viable eggs of Aedes (Stegomyia) scutellaris from New Guinea, the New Hebrides or the Solomon Islands. His reason for wanting these is that he and his students are doing cross-breeding studies with this group of mosquitoes and a colony of the type species is very badly needed.
