NEW CALIFORNIA ARBORETUM FOUNDATION PRESIDENT

RICHARD RAY was elected new president of the California Arboretum Foundation at the annual meeting Sept. 29.

The native of Chicago moved to Woodland Hills with his wife and their six children in 1968 and shortly thereafter became actively involved with the Los Angeles State and County Arboretum through his horticultural publishing ventures. He is closely associated with Walter Doty, retired editor of Sunset magazine, who planned the Sunset Demonstration Home Gardens at the Arboretum sponsored by the magazine. Through his publishing endeavors came the first financial support for the Garden for All Seasons.

Mr. Ray sees the primary role of CAF in the future as two-fold — providing more monetary support for the Arboretum and encouraging more visitors to visit the gardens to take advantage of the many opportunities that are available.

"Cuts in allocations from LA County will force the CAF to increase its contribution to Arboretum operations just to maintain the present level of services," he said. Possible new funding sources he suggested are enthusiastic promotion of the Special Benefactor program and a drive by present CAF members to recruit new members.

He thinks more visitors can be attracted to the Arboretum both by increasing the number of special events such as the recent Santa Anita Flora and Garden Exposition and by upgrading existing exhibits on the grounds. Involvement in horticultural publishing has made Mr. Ray particularly aware of two existing Arboretum attractions that have the potential for drawing more visitors — the Garden for All Seasons and the Plant Science Library.

He noted that the Garden for All Seasons attracts many gardeners looking for innovative planting ideas that can be applied in the home garden. This volunteer-tended garden is currently being expanded because of its great attraction to visitors.

"I'd also like more people to know about the library," he said, "because our library is a good one, perhaps the best on the West Coast."

PARSONS FOUNDATION SUPPORTS ARBORETUM INTERNSHIP PROGRAM

TWO GRANTS TOTALING $34,000 will enable the Los Angeles State and County Arboretum to extend the summer internship program at the garden into the fall, winter, and spring school sessions.

Richard Ray, newly elected president of the California Arboretum Foundation, announced that the Ralph M. Parsons Foundation of Pasadena supplied the first grant of $25,000 and the California Arboretum Foundation then augmented it with $9,000 raised by the group.

Last summer a grant from the Institute of Museum Services was used to initiate an internship program with 16 horticulture students placed in the three gardens operated by the Department. After evaluating benefits to both the students and the gardens, officials decided that they warranted extending the program to a year around work-study course.

Most of the students earned college credit, so their work assignments were planned to give them horticultural field experience to supplement their classroom studies. During the nine-week internships they rotated through various sections of each garden gaining practical experience in all phases of work carried out at public gardens. They spent time propagating plants, operating landscaping equipment, using chemical weed controls, and installing new sprinklers and landscaping.

Besides giving the students hands-on experience, the extended internship program will assure the Arboretum grounds staff of a steady supply of eager assistants with basic horticultural training. Director Francis Ching said that cutbacks in county funds have forced the department to depend on privately financed programs like this one. Without the students, the staff would find it increasingly difficult to maintain and improve plant collections that the public expects to find at the Arboretum.

CALIFORNIA ARBORETUM FOUNDATION SEEKS SPECIAL BENEFACTORS

THE CALIFORNIA ARBORETUM FOUNDATION recently established a new membership category called Special Benefactor as part of its continuing effort to reverse the effects that inadequate funding could cause at the Arboretum.

Committee chairmen Betty (Mrs. Sidney) Wall and Peter Bickford explained that to be recognized as a Special Benefactor a donor must be willing to contribute $1,000 annually for use on a specific project.

Besides all the privileges of Foundation membership, Special Benefactors will be honored in Foundation publications and will be entitled to private guided tours of the Arboretum upon request. This June, members of the group will be guests at a catered luncheon, the first of the annual parties planned exclusively for them.

ADOPTION FANTASY FIESTA

MOVIE STARS, broadcast personalities, and county officials abounded at the Latino Adoption Fiesta Sept. 12 at the Los Angeles State and County Arboretum, but the real stars of the day were 53 Latino children awaiting adoption.

The children were special guests at the festival planned by the Los Angeles County Department of Adoptions to bring hard-to-place adoptees and approved families waiting for a child together in an informal atmosphere. As the children and prospective parents got to know each other some unexpected bonds developed. One couple who had originally applied to adopt an infant girl were so charmed by four brothers that they asked to have the boys placed in their home. Helen Ramirez, director of CDA, also reported that more than 70 people began the necessary adoption proceedings during the fiesta.

The party began with everyone munching hot dogs and popcorn while they enjoyed the clowns and mariachi band. Master of ceremonies, Sonny Melendrez from KFI radio, introduced the children and coaxed from each a glimpse of his or her distinct personality.

Everyone, children and adults alike, crowded around the stage in front of the Queen Anne Cottage to hear the childhood memories related by Ricardo Montalban and Herve Villechaize from the television series "Fantasy Island" and by France Nuyen who starred in "South Pacific."

Later, the many individuals and organizations who contributed so much to the success of the fiesta received scrolls from L.A. County Supervisors Deane Dana and Michael D. Antonovich.
