G. BROWN GOODE, Assistant Secretary, in charge of U. S. National Museum

Washington, August 19, 1891.

Doctor Sereno Watson, Harvard University, Cambridge, Massachusetts.

Dear Doctor Watson:

I had a long talk with Professor Goodale last night about the Herbarium and Holm's mission to Cambridge, and I find that we had quite misunderstood the amount of work which would be necessary upon the Herbarium. I had not thought that it would require more than six weeks or two months. When it comes, however, to a question of detailing Professor Ward's Assistant for a year or more, it raises serious difficulties, and I think that possibly we had better withdraw our request for a share of the Herbarium; at all events, it will be impossible for Holm to do it, and I will recall him at once.

G. BROWN GOODE, Assistant Secretary,

Washington,

I do not know just how much money we can put into the thing, but ^{we} possibly might cooperate with the other Institutions interested, to the extent of paying a part of the services of a man selected by yourself for doing the work. Professor Goodale, when he sees you, will tell you about our conversation.

Yours very truly,

Acting Secretary.

Goode, G. Brown. 1891. "Goode, G. Brown Aug. 19, 1891 [to S. Watson]." Asa Gray correspondence
