

GRAY HERBARIUM OF HARVARD UNIVERSITY,

CAMBRIDGE, MASS.,

FEB. 11, 1909

Dr Joseph D. Hooker is still living at "The Camp", Sunningdale, England, the large country place to which he retired after completing his service as director of the Royal Gardens at Kew. Though he retired from active service some 25 years ago he is still (at the age of 92) active and doing original work and in touch with botanical activities. For notes on his connection with Darwin see the first part of Origin of Species.

Sincerely M. L. F.
