My dear Gray

I have several times of late attempted to write to you, but I had so dreadful an announcement to make, I found myself unequal to the task.

What most admiring of women my dear wife is no more. — In August last she and ~~several~~ ~~of our~~ ~~intimate~~ friends were swept off by a sudden visitation of Cholera at Mt Vernon a small town in this state to which we had retired for ~~appended~~ safety. Thus ends sixteen years by far the happiest portion of my life. — To me she was every thing. What she was as a wife and as a mother I will say nothing; in those relations few equalled her.

But there is an other subject on which it is fitting that to you of whom she always had the highest admiration I should say a few words. I mean her devotion to botanical studies. In these she was my constant companion & co-worker for the last fifteen years; and I can say with strictest truth that more than half of whatever I have done in these pursuits ~~is~~ ^{is} due to her.

Such a clear and discriminating judgement, such memory, industry, energy and dispatch as were hers is rarely to be met with.

She had acquired of Latin & German & French sufficient to read botanical descriptions with ease. In the mechanical labour of writing she was of vast assistance to me. She wrote with remarkable rapidity and accuracy

Indeed accuracy was one of the striking qualities of her mind. In the most difficult & delicate dissections and microscopic examinations she was astonishingly successful. Her enthusiasm for our studies really required to be checked. Her knowledge of Muri & Hepaticæ was very extensive. No female I am sure ever equalled her, and few of the other sex excelled her.

My dear Gray — I send you an unfinished letter written for you near a year since. Something of the kind (tho this is miserably inadequate) was due to the memory of my brothermost dear and excellent wife of whom I can never think without the profoundest emotions of affection & respect. —

Her attainments amply entitle her to a short notice among the celebrities of those devoted to the Natural Sciences & none no shadow could fit evenly with so much dignity than ^{her} Mrs. Schumacher knew well her proficiency in his favorite study has named two species of Myrmeces after her. — I am now having erected to her a suitable monument. On the front the usual names & dates — on the reverse I wish to have a lengthy (20-30 lines) inscription. I would rather have one from you than from anyone else. It can be put in after the monument is up — I will send you a drawing of it soon —

Very truly WSS

Sullivant, William S. 1850. "Sullivant, William Nov 3, 1850." William Starling Sullivant letters –.
