

I hope Eliza is enjoying herself.
I trust she does not lack the strength of Jane. They will like each other, I think. Tell her that she must write often - I can only send her a few lines now - as it is midnight & I have worked like a dog all day.
Tomorrow morning (10<sup>o</sup>) I must rise early - as I expect to visit my dear home - where I have not been for nearly a fortnight.
Give my love to Jane - & believe me as ever - Yours

J. Torrey

New York, Dec. 22nd 1848

My dear friend -

I am disappointed & mortified that the student whom I expected in the last two days to pay for their tickets have kept back. I felt so positive that I would have the $100 promised to you that I considered it as in your hands - Now, at the last hour & I find but $85 in hand - except the $5 which I must send Eliza - to replace what she borrowed of you. I urged the girl to take more money when she was leaving, as I was sure she would need

It - but she stoutly refused - Had I anticipated being so short at this moment, I would have retained some money that was in my hands - After the holidays I will draw up the boys of ~~them~~ remove the balance of the $100. - Dr. Watts has about $200 of mine in his hands but he won't distribute (he is head
- man of the faculty) till he has all the bills settled. This I shall set by & by

You will have seen by the paper, ere this reaches you - that I lost my election in the Free Acad.
- ery - to the advantage of all my friends - & of a great many others.

The other side used incredible pains to insure success - Calling on all the Commisaries, - & urging particularly the appointment of Gibby
- also saying false things about me - When, however - we considered that the appointment was made by 36 small politicians, there is no need of feeling mortified at the result.

The majority of the Nominating Committee were sure of my having a large majority.

It is all, doubtless, for the best - I I try to be cheerful & thankful too, under the disappointment. My plans must now be modified - but I have not had time to make them - I will not be a candidate again for a place where the persons having power to elect are no judges of scientific qualifications.
