

It is so cold here this morning that I cannot feel comfortable without two pairs of pantaloons.

I hope you are enjoying yourself at Cambridge - how much I would prefer studying physiads to reading in your cabinin & spending a week or two in that miserable little town of Hopedale?

With my love to Jane, & my warm thanks for all her kindness to dear Herbert, as well as to myself, believe me, ever yours

John Torrey

St. John, July 24th 1852.

My dear friend. We reached this place on Monday afternoon - having had fine weather all the way from Boston.
- except that it was too cold for me I was actually obliged to lie in bed part of one day, in order to keep warm. Most of my clothing was in the trunk - especially some that I depended on while exposed to the sea air. Our party expected to go on from this place, in a steamer which was to leave on our arrival, but it sailed earlier than was expected - so they took a wagon. I objected to go when I would be obliged to travel nearly all the Sabbath - so they provided another way for me - & I am to leave here for Hopedale today. The rest of the party proceeded in an open wagon - just as it commenced to rain - & they expected to be out part of the night! I shall (80) get on the ground quite early enough.

This is a beautiful town, & is well situated on a somewhat hilly peninsula. The people look much like Americans, & I suppose most of them are - a good many however, are from Scotland - or are of Scotch descent. The services of the churches are decidedly different from ours - & made us feel that we were not at home.

Herbert speaks with much affection of Mrs. Gray - He really loves her - & you too. He also often speaks of the kindness of Mrs. & Mrs. Loring. I have most pleasant remembrance of his visits to Beverly. I just now he is writing to Mrs. Gray.

I have been obliged to purchase some linen & other articles of clothing - but I am not in despair about the trunk. If it has been stolen, then one of the young men who attend the fruit store ought to be watched

I rather think, however, it will turn up, if a sturdy person - especially a policeman, is employed to look for it at the different R.R. Stations. At I may be detained here for a fortnight, I should like to have the trunk (if found) sent to St. John Hotel, in this place. The landlord will forward it to me at Hopewell - the place of trial.

We had a fine view of the coast of Maine, on wet days in the steamer, & I often wished myself ashore that I might gather Seaweeds. What has become of the "State Botanist" of Maine? He has not written to me for more than three years.

The botany of this region seems to be very like that of Massachusetts - but I have had no opportunity of examining it minutely.

BHL

Biodiversity Heritage Library

Torrey, John. 1852. "Torrey, John Jul 21, 1852." John Torrey letters –.

View This Item Online: <https://www.biodiversitylibrary.org/item/310915>

Permalink: <https://www.biodiversitylibrary.org/partpdf/343168>

Holding Institution

Harvard University Botany Libraries

Sponsored by

Arcadia (Open Collections)

Copyright & Reuse

Copyright Status: Public domain. The BHL considers that this work is no longer under copyright protection.

This document was created from content at the Biodiversity Heritage Library, the world's largest open access digital library for biodiversity literature and archives. Visit BHL at <https://www.biodiversitylibrary.org>.