

42 Shepard St.,
Cambridge, Mass.,

12 Nov. 1901.

Dear Mr. Deane:

Thank you very much for the book-plate. I should have acknowledged it before but learned that Mrs. Robinson had met you and told you that it had been received.

Several people who have seen it here have admired both its art and its ingenuity.

My Tringle's this year's collection has just come to land and contains two species of Deanea. One has a tuberous root and may some day replace the parsnip or carrot. On the whole I think Williams' French artichokes would be nowhere compared with a good mess of Deanea with cream sauce.

Cordially yours,

B. L. Robinson.
